A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

by Lynn Broder

By the time you read this we will have said goodbye to 2019 and hello to 2020. As I reflect on my time as president, I am proud to have had the opportunity to serve this community alongside many dedicated and capable volunteers. We have achieved many important goals, learned valuable lessons and continue to work towards the tasks yet to be completed.

Our goal remains to provide events and programs that will fulfill the religious, spiritual, intellectual and social needs of our congregants. We have partnered with a new marketing and outreach professional, Bruce Apar, to increase our presence in the community using local print media, traditional platforms, social media including Facebook, Burbio, online calendars and more. We look forward to continuing to work with him in the coming year to promote our mission and vision throughout the communities that we serve. We have also hired a part time internal communications assistant Sasha Schroeder, who is helping us make sure we keep you all informed and included. We continue to improve our infrastructure and communications internally-we have made some progress and will continue to work to improve this aspect of congregational life.

As my term as president comes to an end, I must thank all of those who made the experience so meaningful and who put their hearts and souls into this place every day-including our office staff Laura Morris and Lori Stalowicz, our porters who maintain our building, our eduction directors Jane Emmer, Sarah Denyer, and Leslie Gottleib, and of course our wonderful clergy Cantor Debbie and Rabbi Reiner. It has been a true privilege to meet with Rabbi Reiner every week, benefitting from his advice and counsel, and go on this journey with him.

Finally, I would like to thank all the hardworking volunteers-too numerous to mention- who keep this place running, especially the board of trustees and the executive committee. I am especially thankful to Larry Hoffman who has generously agreed to step up as President, answering the call to serve. I also want to thank Terry Henry who is stepping back onto the executive committee after a few years away. I am glad to be able to continue working with all these smart and dedicated people and know that I step down leaving Shir Shalom in good hands.

As president, I have grown both personally and as a member of the greater community. I have had the chance to meet and work with many wonderful people whom I might not have known otherwise. I am so grateful that I took that first step 15 years ago, volunteering to run a fundraiser and serve as sisterhood treasurer (a position I still hold if anyone is interested)-all of which led me to one day become president. I'm sure at that time I was focused on how I would find the time to give with all the other demands of daily life and three children, but what I could not have known is how much giving that time would give back to me-in the people I would meet, the work I would be able to do and the reward that comes with giving back. I strongly encourage all our congregants-whether you have just joined our community, or been here for a long time, to volunteer in some way no matter how small. You will be happy you did.

I am excited for all the possibilities that lie ahead and optimistic as we move into the next decade. Our Atid-campaign for the future will ensure that we continue to grow and evolve as a congregation so we can serve the religious, intellectual and spiritual needs of our congregants and our community. I look forward to continuing to serve this community however I can.

FROM RABBI REINER'S DESK

The past several weeks of family leave have flown by, and the reduction of my commitments with Congregation Shir Shalom has allowed me to bond with our (now six month old) son, Asher, care for Samson, and support Ashley in her return to full time work. It was wonderful to spend as much time with our family as I did, and I am returning to work with a newfound appreciation for the challenges that many parents (especially mothers) may experience after the birth or adoption of a child. This was not vacation or especially restful; in addition to familial responsibilities, I spent an average of 25 hours each week in the service of our sacred community, including Shabbat worship, working with B Mitzvah families, and – sadly – supporting several congregants following deaths in their families. I am grateful for the patience and understanding you have shared during this important time as well as the tremendous support of our staff, clergy, and lay leadership, who have taken on additional responsibilities during my reduction in hours.

As I returned from leave, I was fortunate enough to attend the Union for Reform Judaism (URJ) Biennial Convention where I spent time learning from and interacting with Reform Jewish congregational thought leaders from across our country and around the world, including our own Rich Cohen, who gave a fantastic and engaging presentation on "Exceptional Jews." Participating in Shabbat worship with more than five thousand Jews from around the world is a different and uplifting experience. I found inspiration in the words of Rabbi Rick Jacobs, President of the Union for Reform Judaism, encouraging us to rethink what it means to be affiliated with a synagogue, and to ever-widen our tent to welcome more people into our sacred communities.

Embracing diversity and inclusion is a great growing edge for Reform congregations (ours included) – welcoming people into our tent – regardless of their religious background, race, ethnicity, gender, gender identity, gender expression, sexual orientation, age, marital status, education, political affiliation, socio-economic status, and physical appearance. What the Union for Reform Judaism terms "audacious hospitality" reminds us to welcome (eagerly) everyone into our sacred community. Pursuing audacious hospitality should also lead us to rethink what it means to be affiliated with Congregation Shir Shalom as the membership models of years past were predicated on assumptions that were once reasonable and are now far from absolute. How do our current practices for affiliation and financial support reflect our desire to be inclusive and embrace diversity, especially in the context of age, marital status, and socioeconomic status? How can our current practices be adapted to reflect changing views towards affiliation among several different age cohorts in our sacred community?

I would welcome your thoughtful responses!

During the URJ Biennial I attended many sessions focused on developing skills for rabbis/clergy and lay leaders, including a session titled "A Conversation for Politically Conservative Reform Jews." The URJ is an affiliate of the World Union for Progressive Judaism, and while the word "Progressive" refers to our approach to Judaism, it might not surprise you to learn that polling data shows that the majority of Reform Jews lean progressive in their politics. Nevertheless, there are many Reform Jews who are deeply committed to Progressive Judaism and identify as politically conservative. Congregation Shir Shalom is not an outlier in this regard: many people in our congregation identify as politically conservative. Our commitment to diversity and inclusion – audacious hospitality – includes a commitment to ensuring that Congregation Shir Shalom is a sacred community where people with differing political views and affiliations feel welcome. We will sometimes disagree. Listening and recognizing our differences, finding opportunities to engage our diverse views through meaningful conversations, appreciating that diversity extends to political views will help us widen our tent and grow as a sacred community.

Family leave has helped me to grow as a person, a partner, a parent, and a rabbi – thank you for this blessing of time. May we all continue to grow, as individuals and as a diverse and inclusive sacred community.

It was a fabulous classical concert with Peter Dugan (above).

RS SAJE Program: Studies Gun Violence Prevention

Natalie Barden was in grade five when she learned the terrible news that her baby brother, Daniel, had been gunned down at Sandy Hook Elementary School. For her and her brother James, December 14 would never be the same again for their family and so many others in their community. The world changed forever that sad day.

A couple of years after that tragedy, Natalie's father, Mark, spoke at Jewish Family Congregation in South Salem in an event held to remember losses that our two separate communities experienced. Gun violence played a role in both.

We learned that night, that in times of tragedy, communities can be strong and come together to begin to heal--- as one family. Speakers and clergy from Newtown spoke to our congregation and invited guests-- and we also recalled the awful event that took the lives of two of our RS students. Molly and Gregory-- and their mother, Amy, were killed just a year before the horrors of Newtown.

We listened, sang and prayed together, and knew our connection mattered. The Junior Newtown Action Alliance teens sang a song of peace. Their parent group, the NAAA, was represented by Shir Shalom friend, Carol Wakeman, and others who visit Washington, D.C. every year to try to help legislators understand that they must help to enact common sense gun laws to protect all of our families.

In honor of the victims of Sandy Hook, we created two plaques for the memorial wall in the sanctuary – one for the twenty-six victims and one specifically for Lauren Rousseau, a substitute teacher at Sandy Hook and a personal friend of Shir Shalom teacher, Rona Salpeter. A memorial stone, plaque and benches were designed, created and installed by one of our teen Mentors as an Eagle Scout project. These angels, as Natalie calls them, will never be forgotten.

In a recent online Sandy Hook Promise newsletter, Natalie wrote, "I used to leave the gun violence prevention work to my dad, Mark. But we all have to act, even if we don't want to. I know what losing a loved one to gun violence feels like, and I want to prevent other people's lives from being shattered in that same way. Thank you for your support today. Together, we're honoring my brother and everyone who's been killed by gun violence by taking action to build a safer world for all kids."

Our SAJE teens in grades 8-12 (Social Action as Jewish Education) have studied gun violence prevention this semester along with their teachers, Jamie, Gerry, Rabbi Reiner and me. We have had speakers talk with them from several organizations—but it was when Natalie and her friend Danielle Johnson, both high school students in Newtown, spoke to our group that it meant the most. They are examples of teen advocates... kids who are truly making a difference and changing the world. We donated $100 of our school tzedakah funds to the Newtown Foundation and the same amount to Sandy Hook Promise in their honor. These funds will help the teens travel to D.C. to attend the annual memorial held at the cathedral there—as well as visit the offices of CT legislators to beg for change.

Recently at one of our classes, we held a live Facetime call with Rabbi Brad Boxman of Kol Tikva in Parkland, FL. He spoke for over thirty minutes and told about his community's tragedy at Marjory Stoneman Douglas H.S. which killed seventeen. He personally buried two teens who were Jewish. His synagogue became a true sanctuary that tragic day when teens who became B-Mitzvah there, now ran for shelter since the temple was close to their school in which they were escaping. Our teens, with the help of Cantor Debbie, will design, create and send a handmade tallit to Rabbi Boxman's temple to be leant to those in that community in need of extra healing. They have amassed eight tallitot so far—some made by campers at URJ Camp Coleman in nearby Georgia. It will be a real honor to deliver this tallit to that community and we hope RS teacher, Gerry Hecht, will have a chance to do that in person as he has a personal friendship with Rabbi Boxman.

Rabbi Boxman told the governor of his state-- at a meeting held in his temple office that these teens (some of the same students who organized and held the March For Our Lives Rally in March) that these kids were like a train coming through-- and that if he didn't get on board with their agenda, the train would run right past and over him. He was proud to share that metaphor with our students. Those teens are hoping for new laws that address the issue of mandatory background checks and making assault weapons designed for military use-- illegal. Our teens agree. We welcome everyone to learn more about our SAJE program and encourage newcomers at any time. Through social action, community service projects and Jewish education, our school's teens are taking the call to action seriously.

"Good News!"

Gregory, Molly, & Amy

Jeff and Margie Gorelick are delighted to announce the birth of their third grandchild, Eve Leah, who was born on November 20, 2019 in New York City. Eve's parents, Marc and Elana Sehgal are so excited about the arrival of their new baby girl. Eve weighed in at 6 pounds 10 ounces. Mom and baby Eve are both doing well.

EXCERPTS IN JEWISH HISTORY

THE HASMONEAN DYNASTY; WHO WAS THE LAST MAN STANDING?

By Lewis Siegel

INTRODUCTION

In religious school, like everyone else, I learned about the Hanukah story. Judas Maccabeus' army drove Antiochus Epiphanes IV and his Greek (Seleucid) army, out of Jerusalem after the Seleucids desecrated the Temple. The Temple was restored and the oil, which was only enough for one day, lasted eight days. (actually, the miracle of the oil story was probably not known until It was found in the Babylonian Talmud about 700 years later). But I never learned what happened in the years after. It wasn't until later in life that I became curious about that epoch in Jewish history. What I found was that the period from 164 BCE to 37 BCE was a chapter in Jewish history that made me feel very uncomfortable. I had reservations writing about it, because it was a turbulent historical period with violence between Jews, and particularly within families. After considerable thought, I decided to go ahead and present that period of Jewish history as I believed it actually occurred, along with its many blemishes.

Here is a skeletal outline of what happened after the restoration of the Temple.

Judas was killed in battle about five years after he restored the Temple. The Seleucids regrouped and regained control of Jerusalem. For the next 125 years or so, control of the Jewish state (Judea) alternated respectively between the Seleucids and the Jews together, the Jews alone, the Romans and the Jews together, and finally the Romans alone. It ended in 37 BCE, when Herod became ruler of Judea.

DETAILS OF THE STORY,

Judas Maccabeus was the son of Mattathias and one of five brothers. After his father died, Judas led an army into Jerusalem in 167 BCE to drive out the Seleucids (who had desecrated the Temple and prohibited the practice of Judaism). After three years of warfare, the Seleucids were finally driven out. Judas restored the Temple and became ruler of the Jewish people from 164 to 160 BCE. However, the Seleucids re-fortified and attacked again. Judas was killed in battle, and the Seleucids took control of Judea. It was now up to Judas' surviving brothers, Jonathan and Simon, to regain the land for the Jewish people. The other brothers, Johanan and Eleazer had been killed in earlier battles.

Let's Make a Deal

Jonathan had hopes of recapturing Jerusalem and becoming High Priest and Ruler, but he needed help. He built up his forces to the extent that he was able to make an alliance with the Seleucid ruler, Demetrius, who also thought it advantageous to have the Jewish forces on his side. So, they combined armies, and peacefully coexisted for the next six years (but Jonathan still had no autonomy over the Jewish people). In 147 BCE, a rival of Demetrius, Alexander Balas, came forth to claim leadership of the Seleucids. A battle ensued between Demetrius and Balas. Demetrius was defeated, and Balas enticed Jonathan to join forces with him. Balas allowed Jonathan to be appointed High Priest of Judea. Jonathan remained in that position for about five years until the son of Demetrius, Demetrius II, arose and claimed to be the true Seleucid leader. Jonathan remained on the side of Balas, but when Demetrius II defeated Balas in a civil war, Jonathan tried to switch sides. But it was too late. Demetrius II had Jonathan killed, his two sons captured, and the family were never heard from again.

Let's Make a Deal; Next Man Up

After Jonathan was killed, Simon thought it would be beneficial to join Demetrius II, in spite of what happened to his brother. Demetrius II was happy to have Simon and his forces on his side, and appointed Simon High Priest and ruler of Judea. Simon ruled until 135 BCE, until another tragedy occurred. He and two of his sons were assassinated by his son-in-law.

The Hasmoneans have arrived

At this point in time, all of the sons of Mattathias had been killed. Simon was the first of a series of Jewish leaders, some of whom had the dual role of High Priest and political ruler. That chain of Jewish leaders became known as the Hasmonean Dynasty. The dynasty lasted until 37 BCE. Why the name Hasmonean? It was believed to have been derived from Asmoneus, the great grandfather of Mattathias.

A New Hasmonean Ruler Arises

Around 135 BCE the Seleucid Empire was showing signs of disintegrating. At the same time, the surviving son of Simon, John Hyrcanus, amassed an army. Without opposition, he assumed the position of ruler and high priest of Judea. He wanted to expand his territory, and during his 25 years as ruler he conquered Transjordan, Samaria, Galilee and Idumea. The importance of Idumea was that it was Idumea where he forcefully converted the entire population to Judaism. It was also to be the homeland of Herod the Great, who would later become King of Judea. Unlike his predecessors, John Hyrcanus died of natural causes.

I Can't believe What He Did

John Hyrcanus expected his wife to succeed him as ruler and his eldest son, Aristobulus, to become High Priest. Aristobulus, however, had other plans. He immediately imprisoned his mother, who eventually died in prison. He also imprisoned three of his brothers and killed a fourth brother (who had been his ally). In 103 BCE, He died of a painful illness after only one year as ruler. Aristobulus' wife Salome (the humane one in the family), released the three brothers from prison, and married one of them, Alexandre Jannaeus. He became the new ruler of Judea.

He Was as Bad as his Brother, Maybe Worse

Alexandre Jannaeus wanted to expand Judea also, so he conquered Gaza and the city of Acre in 94 BCE. He had an affinity for Hellenist culture and rituals, but had little knowledge of Jewish rituals. While he attempted to perform a ritual for Sukkot in front of a large crowd of people, he erroneously poured water over his feet instead of on the Altar. The crowd mocked him unmercifully, and in retaliation (according to the Jewish historian Josephus, who lived in the first century CE), he had the entire group of people who mocked him, killed. Alexandre Jannaeus also put to death other individuals whom he perceived to be rebellious of his leadership. He died in the year 76 BCE and his kingdom was left to his wife Salome Alexandre. She formed an army, fortified cities of the kingdom, and even established a Sanhedrin as a Supreme Court, and before she died in 67 BCE, appointed her son Hyrcannus II as successor. Hyrcanus II reigned for only three months when his brother, Aristobulus II formed an army of followers, captured the temple, forced his brother to surrender his rulership, and claimed the throne of Judea for himself. He ruled until 63 BCE.

It's 63 BCE, The Romans Are Coming; The Background

Caesar, Crassus, and Pompey became a triumvirate of Roman generals during the first century BCE. Crassus was killed in a war with the Parthian Empire based in Persia. Caesar and Pompey formed a loose alliance which became tighter when Pompey married Caesar's daughter. That friendship ended when she died in childbirth along with her newborn. The alliance was over and the two generals became enemies.

Pompey invaded Judea in 63 BCE, but he allowed the Judean state to continue with local autonomy, maybe, because he was pre-occupied with other warfare. Pompey did have Hyrcanus II reinstated on the throne because Hyrcanus II was weaker than his brother Aristobulus II, and less likely to start a rebellion against Rome. Aristobulus II was shipped to Rome as a prisoner, while Hyrcanus II ruled Judea until about 40 BCE.

Antigonus II Mattathias, Herod and the End of the Hasmonean Dynasty

After the deaths of Pompey in 48 BCE and Caesar in 44 BCE, Antigonus II Mattathias, the son of Aristobulus II, formed an army, established an alliance with the Parthians (from Persia), and conquered Jerusalem. He ended the rulership of his uncle Hyrcanus II, by savagely injuring him and sent him off to live in Babylonia. Antigonus became ruler and High Priest. However, the Roman Senate had intended to appoint Herod, King of Judea in 40 BCE, but fighting broke out between the forces of Antigonus and a Roman army led by Herod. Herod defeated Antigonus in a war that lasted three years. Antigonus was executed, and Herod ruled Judea from 37 BCE until his death in 4 BCE.

Thus, ended the Hasmonean Dynasty in 37 BCE. It lasted 103 years. Perhaps the one positive thing about the Hasmonean Dynasty was that it was the only period in Jewish history between 586 BCE and 1948 CE, that the Jewish people had autonomy over their own land.

SO, WHO WAS THE LAST MAN STANDING? IT HAD TO BE HEROD. He ruled Judea for 33 years and died of natural causes.

FINAL NOTES

1. How did Herod Become King of Judea?

Herod was raised as a Jew. He was the son of Antipater, an Idumean, who converted to Judaism during the forceful conversions imposed by John Hyrcanus. Antipater was an artful politician who became an assistant to the later Hasmonean rulers. More importantly, Antipater formed an army and provided military support for Julius Caesar when he was fighting a battle in Alexandria. That endeared him to the Romans and probably helped him convince the Roman Senate to appoint his son Herod to become ruler of Judea. In addition, Herod already had achieved political status as Governor of Galilee for a number of years.

2. The Complexity of the Story

The detailed story of the Hasmonean Dynasty was more complex than shown here. There were more individuals involved and more detailed events. Nevertheless, while making an effort to weed out much of what (I believe) was extraneous material, I tried to present the story concisely without leaving out essential information, or distorting its fundamental accuracy.

 Judea was the name of the Jewish State used during the Greek and Roman period as a variation of Judah. The name Judea lasted until 135 CE, when the Roman emperor Hadrian, probably because of his dislike of Jews, changed the name to Provincia Syria Palestina (later Anglicized to Palestine), in memory of the Philistines.
